

5 Not Safe For Kids (NSFK) shows to enjoy when the children are away

If you ever find yourself away from the kids during the holidays, hunker down with one of these shows.
PHOTO: Mediacorp, Netflix, HBO

by BRYAN LIM (/BYLINE/BRYAN-LIM)
ASIAONE (/SOURCE/ASIAONE) | May 30, 2019

The bell has rung and school is out for the June holidays! (Well, almost.)

What most parents don't realise is that this is also a time for them to kick back and relax.

Because after months of taking care of your kids and attending to their needs in the name of their scholarly pursuits, you can finally take a breather too.

While you assign a list of fun holiday activities (<https://www.asiaone.com/singapore/fun-june-school-holiday-activities-will-keep-your-kids-busy-and-out-your-hair>) for them to do with friends (or a domestic helper), pour yourself a large glass of wine and unwind with the following NSFK (Not Safe For Kids) shows.

Parents, like any other working adults, deserve a personal wellness day too.

5. DEREK (TOGGLE)

Desmond Tan reprises his role as Derek Ho in the Toggle Original, Derek. Photo: Mediacorp

After a successful run on Code of Law as the serial killer Derek Ho (who quickly became a fan favourite), Desmond Tan reprises his role in the spin-off, Derek.

In this Toggle Original, Derek's backstory is explored through flashbacks told to psychologist Dr Winnie Low (Cheryl Tan) as a team of investigators race to piece together a criminal psychological profile before he is hanged.

Gripping, mystifying and disquieting, Derek dives into the dark and broken psyche of a serial killer and draws out a vulnerable (and almost sympathetic) side to the character.

The show did a decent job at showing what local productions are capable of ...